We care about the people we serve. We care about the people we employ.

Goodwill® is in the business of putting people to work. That's why our own employees are so important to the critical work we do. We strive to recruit motivated, talented leaders who are passionate about business and passionate about our mission.

Goodwill is an organization with a rich, 100-plus year history, yet today's agencies and the Member Services Center are also vibrant, innovative places to work, where employees are valued for their talents and what they can bring to our diverse business lines: mission services, retail/donated goods, and business development.

Goodwill Industries® may be known for its stores, but we're a whole lot more.

Goodwill Industries is one of the nation's top five most valuable and recognized nonprofit brands as well as a leading social services enterprise.

Goodwill is comprised of 166 independent, community-based Goodwill agencies in the United States and Canada, and 14 international affiliates.

Collectively, we provided employment training, job placement and other community services to 1.5 million people in the United States and Canada in 2008. We achieved this by selling donated clothes and household items at Goodwill retail stores and online, and through contract services, private and public grants, and individual giving.

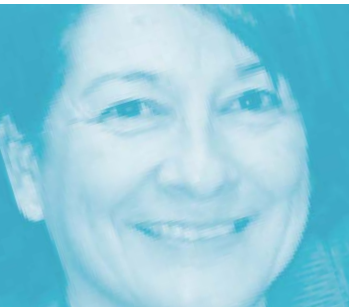

The Goodwill Industries International member services team in Rockville, MD, supports the work of local Goodwill agencies by offering consultations, learning opportunities, advocacy for public policy, national media support, leadership development, research and more.

Great People, Great Careers

"I actually had two other job offers when I accepted the job at Goodwill. I work extremely hard, always have. But now, there is a purpose to that work that is not self. Being a leader at my Goodwill gives me the opportunity to make a more concrete difference in someone's life."

Maria Prindle
Director, Goodwill
Industries of New Mexico

"I left the for-profit sector for a more meaningful career. I was able to bring business practices to the nonprofit world, which challenged me to do more with less and to become a well-rounded leader pretty quickly."

Walter Reyes
Vice President, Goodwill
Industries of Greater
New York and Northern
New Jersey

"My experience in banking led me to this conclusion: give people knowledge so they can make more informed decisions. Goodwill has offered me the opportunity to utilize my previous experience in order to create programs that empower everyday people, their families, and communities."

Janelle Lawrence
Director, Goodwill
Industries International, Inc.
